The North Royalton Hills Lions and Pulte Homes teamed up to rebuild Safety Town.

Royalton Hills Lions

Last summer the Royalton Hills Lions Club saw the aging buildings at North Royalton's Safety Town and decided to do something about it. They contacted Pulte Homes who agreed to furnish the lumber and cut out the houses. Next stop for the buildings was the school maintenance department where Steve Nyetrae, Wade Schneider and Les Dobroka assembled the houses.

The NRHS Art League agreed to paint the houses. The Lions Club asked the young artists to submit drawings of their vision for the houses. Eight designs were chosen and the artists went to work to make their designs a reality.

Leia Mason and Gina Ranucci created MooTown ice creamshop. Maria Rokakis painted a beautiful Pulte model home and also a fire station. Steph Barnik added Giant Eagle and Katie Maruscak gave the students a pet store. Jeri Brasty combined all the elementary school into one building and Nina Zivovic recreated Toys R Us. Last but not least, Danielle Beben put flowers and the sun on a Maria Gardens building.

The Lions Club had planned to award $200 in prize money to the best three houses, but decided they were all winners and split the money among all seven students.

The houses were presented to the Board of Education on June 12, and the students started using them the next day.
